FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

How can I study in Canada with a scholarship?

To obtain a scholarship in Canada, aim for top grades (GPA of 3.8/4.0 or higher) and showcase leadership and commitment to your field.

Scholarships are highly competitive and favour academically exceptional students. If you need alternatives, we can guide you towards budget-friendly schools or suggest funding options that meet visa requirements.

How much does it cost to study in Canada?

Tuition fees in Canada vary by program and province.

Undergraduate fees range from $15,000 CAD to $50,000 CAD annually, with higher costs for specialized programs like medicine or doctoral studies.

May I work and study at the same time?

International students in Canada can work up to 20 hours per week during academic sessions and full-time during breaks. Jobs are available on-campus (like research or lab assistants) and off-campus (like barista or retail roles).

Working part-time helps gain practical experience and supports your studies. No separate work permit is needed, but ensure you have the right documents.
